250 Homes Destroyed By Blaze

(AP and UPI)

LOS ANGELES - The worst fire in Los Angeles history cut through the heart of the movie colony Monday, destroying 250 homes, many of notables, and sending 3,000 people fleeing, including former vice-president Richard Nixon.

The war-like holocaust leaped through the canyons and over the hilltops of the rich property between Beverly Hills and the San Fernando Valley. And many a star found himself involved in a real-life Fears drama of evacuating families and possessions.

Failure in the Congo

STILL SMARTING from its recent humiliating defeat at the hands of Katanga President Moishe Tshombe's well-trained soldiers, the United Nations Congo army today finds itself in the embarrassing position of being unable to carry out the duties it is bound to perform.

Under its original instructions of a year ago, the role of the UN force was simple and clear-cut; namely, to establish and maintain law and order throughout the chaotic republic.

However, since that date and in view of the rapidly deteriorating political situation in The Congo, a special Security Council vote extended the duties of the force by ordering it to give full support to the Central Congo government and to use force if necessary to bring the secessionist province of Katanga into a recognized republic.

The utter failure the UN force achieved in attempting to follow these orders is now history—a futile and disastrous exercise in military ineptitude which was also the direct cause of the death of the late Secretary-General of the United Nations, Mr. Dag

Troops under the UN command have now withdrawn from Katanga under a cease fire agreement which not only resulted in the return of prisoners but also precluded any further armed invasion of the territory by the United Nations.

The UN-Katanga truce agreement, however, was not in any way binding upon the Central Congo government, whose forces under command of Major General Mobutu are now aftempting to succeed where the UN army failed. To date the Congolese army's experience matches that of the UN troops, having met with severe reverses and heavy casualties.

Meanwhile the UN force, pledged to bring about, order, stands by to watch the situation develop into a full-scale civil war which has every likelihood of resulting in a state of affairs far worse than that existing 12 months ago.

Though the UN force supreme commander General Sean McKeown can be held to answer for his poor military judgment he cannot be held wholly responsible for this present debacle. He has had little backing for his unrewarding jungle and veldt campaign-narrow national interests and rivalries have reduced his army and interference has crippled his planning while the continual haggling within the UN itself has removed what little unified support he might once have enjoyed.

The major blame must rest upon the General Assembly of the United Nations as a whole, for it is there that the confusion over The Congo operation begins. Though the United States supports the activities of the UN Congo force, as does Canada, Britain's support is only lukewarm. France and the Soviet bloc are against it, while the Afro-Asian nations remain at complete loggerheads over the whole issue.

To heap coals upon the already raging inferno of clashing national interests and political ideologies, the Central Congo government which the UN force is sworn to support, has all the earmarks of falling under Communist domination. On the other hand, Katanga province, the present villain of the piece, maintains as near a democratic form of government as is possible to get in a newly emerged African state. These are the urgent problems facing the new acting Secretary General of the United Nations, Mr. U Thant. To a large degree the decision as to whether the United Nations can successfully continue to operate as an international police force rests upon him. And though the words sound evnical, he may take heart in the fact that whatever course he chooses cannot make matters worse than they are now.

Why Import Them?

SUGGESTION has been made by Alderman Michael Griffin that city council should engage an expert or a team of experts from the Seattle Century 21 world fair organization to evaluate Victoria's centennial preparations. He believes, he says, that the Victoria planners are doing a good job, but the general public seems to be less sure; an appraisal by a Seattle team would be "cheap insurance"

As usual, Alderman Griffin has shown himself direct and energetic in his approach to a matter of civic importance. He is right in speaking out about public concern over centennial preparations, and right in thinking an evaluation would be welcome.

But does Victoria need to bring in experts on a world fair, an $80,000,000 enterprise, from outside the country to tell it how to organize its birthday cele-Where is the similarity?

Victoria, preparing to mark its centenary, needs advice from world fair experts about as much as Cobble Hill, preparing for a fall fair, would need advice from Canadian National Exhibition organizers.

Surely city council itself can obtain the facts on centennial planning, and itself can judge-under the eye of the public-if sufficient progress has been made at this late date and if the program so far delineated is of the kind that will best suit the desires of the

Asking for Trouble

GENERAL Charles Foulkes, former chief of the Canadian defence staffs, warns against risking the destruction of the world merely to save Berlin. The German city couldn't be saved by war in any case; one look at the map should convince anyone of

The general emphasized that the defence of Berlin is militarily unsound, surrounded as it is by Sovietcontrolled territory with the main Western forces 100 miles away. And the limited use of nuclear weapons would invite an all-out nuclear war.

There is knowledge and wisdom, therefore, be hind General Foulkes' contention that the Berlin issue should be settled by negotiation and not by

Somewhat strange, however, is the general's strategy to counter the Soviet threat to Berlin. Among other ways of bringing pressure to bear on Russia he suggests a blockade of the Baltic or the Bosphorous, the Soviet outlets to the Atlantic and the Mediterranean respectively. This, surely, would be equivalent to fighting for Berlin, or even more expiosive. East Germany fake a technical excuse for sealing off the two Berlins but a Western blockade of this nature would be invalid in time of peace. It would be tantamount to a declaration of war. Soviet ships could only be stopped by force, and this could scarcely be reconciled with the idea that the Berlin issue should be settled by negotiation.

Maligned

As a single woman, though not employed in a store part-time or otherwise. I write on behalf of the single women so employed and so grossly maligned in the item in Thursday's Colonist—"Single Women 'Bypassed' in Store Job."

The extraordinary assumption that because an employee is not earning enough in a part-time job she would steal, is damning to those who assume that this is so; since if they sincerely believe it, they would obviously steel themselves in tike circumstances. Apropos, in any floms on court cases which I happen to read it seems to me that shoplifting, etc., is usually attributed to a

In the same issue is an article headed "Police Call Meeting to Stop Vandalism." Is there some connection between the employment of married women and the rapid increase in juvenile delinquency in recent years?

For married women who have children and have to go out to work one can only sympathize. However, many of them work to pay off a mortgage on a home which is beyond the earning capacity of their husbands to buy; some merely for "pin-money."

Of what use is a $15,000 home if the children in it grow up with the sort of mentality that thinks it is fun to wreck someone cise's more modest home? (Miss) GRACE S. JACKSON.

Frightening

May I commend you for the excellent article and follow-up editorial on the lewd literature available to the youth of our city. It is frightening to realize there are such sinister inflences lurking outside the home waiting to-grey on young minds.

I read recently in Reader's Digest of the planned immorality program of the Red regime in its satellite countries to deteriorate completely the respectable social structure and undoubtedly the faith and self respect of these people. How much more serious to find here in our own country the same devastating results being effected by a group of our respectable citizens (the storekeepers who display and sell such filth) who are selling the soul of our society for a few.

Y sincerely hope that there are enough parents, aducators and other interested people here in our city to promote a campaign to have at least this one evil oved from our society for the benefit of all (Mrs.) LLONA O'GORMAN.

Diplomatic

The Canadian government really must be congratulated on the diplomatic way in which it is introducing nuclear weapons into Canada. Soon we shall be as proud of ourselves and as safe as the next fellow:

First, the government, with quiet determination, builds Bomarc bases. . . Next, under a cloak of secrecy, the Bomarcs are brought in. When will the necessary nuclear warheads appear?

The government naively protests that no decision has been reached regarding Canada's acceptance of nuclear weapons. Why does one prepare a play-pen and purchase a baby carriage if no baby is expected? (Mrs.) J. THORKELSON.

Second Thoughts

At the last special session of the legislature the entire Liberal block, including the member from Oak Bay, voted with the government to take over the B.C. Electric Company. No amendment to preserve the long established right to appeal to the courts was offered.

The real issue at stake here was not public power versus private power, but due process of law and the preservation of basic principles of British justice. Not, until world wide public outcry was heard, did the member from Oak Bay have any second thoughts. He now casti gates the Chamber of Commerce for not taking the stand that he as elected representative of Oak Bay should have taken before the bill was passed.

The Conservatives of Oak Bay offered as their candi date a man who would never have allowed this bill to pass in its present form without a protest that would have been heard throughout Canada. Nor would he have attompted to confuse the public as to his stand on the issue by denouncing the Chamber of Commerce for their failure to do what he should have done.

Shell scientists test Super Shell's special Winter Blend in a new all-weather laboratory. Temperature and humidity can be varied to duplicate weather conditions from Halifax to B.C.

B.C. WINTER BLEND

Shell scientists adjust three of Super Shell's nine ingredients to create a special winter formula for top performance in damp West Coast weather

Shell's nine ingredients especially formulated to give you faster starts and quicker warm-ups on cold mornings. The dosage of two ingredients (butane and mixed pentanes) has increased. A third ingredient is added to cut stalling caused by carburetor frosting. Read how Super Shell's B.C. Winter Blend helps make cold weather driving more pleasant.

A GASOLINE that gives you top performance in summer can make your car difficult to start and balky to drive when the temperature drops.

Tests in Shell's new winter laboratory prove it—at temperatures from forty above to forty below zero—and in man made sleet, fog, snow. That is why, this October, Shell scientists have altered the formula of Super Shell to create a special mix for low temperatures and high humidity—a B.C. Winter Blend.

Here is how three of the nine ingredients in Super Shell have been adjusted to create a Winter Blend for West Coast weather conditions:

Carburetor defroster added to prevent stalking on chill, damp days

It's a surprising fact that your carburetor can frost up even when the temperature is a mild 45°. Carburetor frosting happens most often on chilly, wettish days when there's a lot of moisture in the air.

Here's why: Your carburetor gulps great breaths of air to mix with gasoline—actually 14 parts of air to one part fuel vapor.

As gasoline vaporizes a curious thing happens. It pulls heat out of the air. The inside of your carburetor is soon as cold

"Carburetor frosting (sometimes called "carburetor scing," or simply "cold stalling"), should not be confused with gas line freezing, Carburetor frosting occurs in chilly, damp weather. It does not occur in cold, dry weather. When the mercury dips to 10° or below, carburetor frosting is no longer a problem, but gas line freezing can occur. Water condensing in your car's fuel tank freezes in the gas line. This stops the flow af gasoline and you are stalled. The best insurance against gas line freezing is a can of gas line anti-freeze added at your Shell service-station. Never let your tank get below half full—the less and the less moisture there is to condense.

as your refrigerator. The moisture in the air freezes and clings to the metal carburetor walls like the frost that forms in your refrigerator.

Under normal running conditions you won't be aware of the frost, but when you close the throttle, e.g. at a red light, it can choke off the air supply and your engine stalls. The anti-froster in Super Shell fights this maddening phenomenon by coating carburetor walls so that ice can't stick to them. This drastically reduces your chances of an icing stall whenever the temperature drops to 45° or lower.

2. Butane content increased to give you quick starts

If you have trouble starting your car in cold weather it may be that your gasoline is not vaporizing as promptly as it should. Until it stirts to vaporize and mix with the air in your carbutetor, gasoline has a hard time "firing" your shell scientists fight this problem with an extra dose of butane. Butane is highly volatile—which means that it changes easily from a liquid to a vapor. The change is the same sort of thing that happens when water boils and turns into steam. Butane actually boils and vaporizes at 31.1°F.—lower than the temperature inside your refrigerator. It is so eager to get going Shell has to store it under pressure until it is tamed by mixing with other ingredients.

This remarkable ingredient increases the volatility of Super Shell dramatically. Fires your engine in a hurry. Takes a strain off your battery—and also off your patience.

3. A bigger dose of mixed pentanes for fast warm-ups on cold days

Starting is just part of the story. Cold engines struggle and sputter annoyingly until they warm up. This wastes gasoline.

That is why Shell scientists increase the dose of mixed pentanes in Super Shell's B.C. Winter Blend—to speed up the delivery of heat to your engine. Shell makes mixed pentanes by subjecting petroleum to terrific heat, transforming heavier hydrocarbons into lighter, quick-burning molecules. Blended into Super Shell, these quick-burning molecules work much like kindling in a log fire. They ignite easily and everything gets going quickly. Your engine warms up faster, gets over that hesitant, balky feeling in a hurry.

Fill up with special B.C. Winter Blend

Make sure you're ready for winter driving with a tankful of Super Shell's B.C. Winter Blend.

Its nine-ingredient formula is adjusted to help make the difference between balky, sputtering performance and a first, smooth getaway. Don't forget all the other ingredients in today's Super Shell (See box). They're working every day you drive, every season of the year, to give you top performance.

The 9 ingredients in Super Shell and what they do to give your car top performance

- #1 is TCP1 for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
- #2 is mixed pentancs for fast warm-ups.
- #3 is anti-knock mix to resist all kinds of knock.
- #4 is gum preventive to keep carburetors clean inside.
- 15 is butane for quick starts on cold mornings

- 16 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for extra power.
- #7 is a carburetor defroster (added in cold weather)
- is heavy alkanes to help control "high-speed knock."
- 19 is Platformate for extra mileage.

Schloredt May End Football Career

Quarterback Bob Schloredt, hero of two Rose Bowl games; said today he is considering quitting football for dentistry.

He made the comment in an interview following the end of the 16-game Western Conference schedule, during which he spent most of his first year in ofessional football as fefensive backfielder with British Columbia Lions. Schloredt said he has no complaint about the Lions and added that he has a contract signed for next season. he plans to spend the next few months debating whether future secruity will be found best in dentistry or pro foot-

"I'm going back to school now to finish my degree and then it'd be a four-year course if I went on to dentistry," said the former Washington University ace. "I couldn't continue in football if I went into dentistry-be cause the dates clash. I have chances to go into practice with some dentists in Seattle and Portland."

Schloredt, twice voted outstanding player in Rose Bowl games as he led the Washington Huskies to two Bowl vic-tories before turning pro this year, said he'll talk with head coach Dave Skrien of Lions before leaving Vancouver for Scattle later this week. "Don't get the idea I'm try-like that," he said, "I'd must rather play football for a career than be a dentist. I enjoy playing de-fensive halfback but I came here trying for quarterback.

"During the next months I'll just try to figure out whether I'm cut out for pro ball." Schloredt saw little action at quarterback during the 1961 season, when Lions won once and tied two games while losing 13.

Modern group insurance has made it possible for thousands of Canadians to obtain low-cost life insurance protection they might. not otherwise have-and this is important! But, it cannot and should not take the place of permanent personal life insurance—the type which you own and control.

Such permanent insurance policies will not only give your family immediate protection for the full amount, they will also have values, increasing year by year, which can be readily used as collateral for emergency loans or business purposes.

Permanent personal policies assure you of these benefits and most plans may provide a guaranteed monthly income on retirement.

Plant Plays Possum

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Soon after I came to Victoria. 20 years ago, I decided that one plant I absolutely must have was a Wisteria, for I don't think I had ever seen anything so beautiful as a vine trained over the doorway of a certain Uplands home. I bought a good plant from a local nursery in the spring, prepared the soil carefully and planted against the wall of our home.

There it remained all through the summer and well into the fall, doing nothing at all, looking exactly as it had when I bought it—no leaves, and with its stems looking more like strands of string than the branches of a living plant. By the time October rolled around, still with no signs of growth, I became convinced that the nurseryman had sold me a pup, so in disgust I yanked the thing out of the ground and threw it on the rub-

Soon after this, a visiting friend saw the plant lying there and asked if he could have it. I told him he was welcome to it, but that it had been in that apparently lifeless condi-tion all through the year. He took it away, however, and planted it in his own garden. The following spring it thrived and blossomed regularly ever

I have since learned that it is quite a common thing for a Wisteria. newly transplanted, to play possum for eight or nine or even 12 months before it breaks into leaf. This experience taught me never to discard a plant from surface indications ajone, but to scrape off a little of the bark from the stern to see whether there is any green in the inner bark. or whether the wood is really brown

Mention of climbers reminds me of another mistake I made, this time with Clematis. I wanted one to adorn a broad, high trellis screen.

The plant was set into the ground with the root ball close to the foot of the screen. The branches were unravelled from their supporting cane and tied as vertically as possible to the latticework, as I wanted to get all the height I could from the very

In due time, new growth started, but it was all from the buds near the tip of every branch or shoot. Very soon the new young growth had reached the top of the screen, and after the first year there has been thick growth along the upper portion of the screen, but down below on the lower half there has been nothing but have, brown stems.

Since that time, whenever I plant Clematis, I set the roots about a foot away from the wall and make a shallow trench, about three inches deny, along the foot of the wall and running parallel to it. A couple of atems of the plant are pegged down in this trench and covered with sandy soil, while any remaining shoots are tied to the wall in a low arch less than a foot from the ground.

Treated in this way, young growths start from every leaf joint to grow in an upward direction. and is a simple matter to guide these in such a manner as to furnish the whole wall space. The buried shoots put out roots as well as topgrowth

Any branch of any plant will always flower and bear fruit much more freely when it is growing horizontally or arching slightly downward than when it is sticking straight up. This is why the fruiting arms of grape vines are trained along horizontal wires, and why fruit growers will often correct the up-ward-growing habit of branches by tying a weight on the tip to pull it

WOR, New York, blankets 13 states and claims to be the only radio station in the U.S. which is a true "talk" station, From 9 a.m. until 4.15 station, From 9 a.m. until 4.15 p.m. it broadcasts not a bit of music; it's all talk and one of the most ener-getic of the talkers is Martha Deane treal name Mrs. William Taylor) who has been conducting a 45-minute show there five days a week for 20

"Two been eating chicken tetraz-zini at Sardi's restaurant for 20 years now," she said somewhat morosely the other day. "My twins are 17 years old—a boy and a girl—and they were born on New Year's Eve and you can't do better than that. I live in Manhattan and on Shelter Island-isn't that chic?

"As for holding a job and being a mother and wife, it's never been easy to run two jobs alone. Most of my friends have jobs and are married. And it isn't easy for anyone except movie stars who are always saying how simple the whole thing is.—The only thing is that we seldem get to see our little ones as often as we'd like. I'm going to be in a play this year but we do plan to fly the little ones in for Christmas vacation' (she does a marvelious mimicry of the maternal movie star). When I hear this, I excuse myself from the microphone and go into the hall and get sick to my stomach.

"I had Ethel Merman on the show some years back when she was being housewife, mother, and star of 'Call Me Madam.' I asked her how she did all three. She replied: 'It's very sim ple. I just get up at 5 every morning and have a nervous breakdown.' And she said it with feeling.

"Tve never had a nervous broak-down and I've never been close. But it does take a bit of doing. I would say if a woman is interested in doing these two jobs she will have to decide very early in her life what to eliminate. You can't be the best hostess in town, be a lecturer and write books, while being a wife, mother, and holding a job."

Mrs. Taylor doesn't have much time for watching television and hardly considers a television program of her ewn. She already has a full enough schedule, and, when she gets home"We talk. My family doesn't let me talk too much because they always say I've already had 45 min-utes of uninterrupted talking."

* * * Her guests have included such people as James Thurber, Eleanor Roosevelt, Robert Ruark, Averell Harriman, Mrs. Robert Kennedy, Carmine de Sapio, and Margaret Mead—to name only a very few?

Have there been changes in radio interviews in 20 years?

The listeners have changed. They are more serious than when I started They know where Ghana is and they don't misspell it on their postcards I don't believe in 12-year-old minds as far as the public is concerned. If you believe that, well, there's no work at all. You don't have to do research or find interesting, informed guests. You just call press agents and get stariets, All you have do is convince yourself the public

"The only subjects I stay clear of are subjects that put me to sleep, because I figure if Tm asleep, there won't be any listeners."

If gambling could be stopped or greatly reduced in Canada, he said, "there is room for doubt that the syndicates would be interested to the point of faking over direct control."

Already, he added, gambling in Canada involves "many mil-lions of dollars" with the criminal bookies raking off a 10 to 15 per cent profit.

"An awareness on the part of the public might bring about a falling-off in the patronage of the bookies and horse-parlors, and therefore in the profits to the operators. Increased police activities against the bookies is another means by which gambling can be curbed—particularly if such police action is followed by

MacDonald C. MacDonald issued statements shortly after delivery of a speech by RCMP Inspector G. W. Harvison.

Mr. MacDonald said the inspector's words had been directed primarily to Attorney-General Kelso Roberts.

"The simple fact of the matter is that the greatest obstacle to coming to grips with organized crime in this province is the attorney-general himself," Mr. MacDonald said.

"Like Lord Nelson of old, he insists on putting the telescope to his blind eye, and solemnly proclaims there is no organized crime."

Mr. Wintermeyer said his party will formally demand the government appoint a royal commission to investigate organized gambling when the legislature meets soon.
